

JHP Pharmaceuticals Enters Agreement to Produce Life-Saving Drug

PARSIPPANY, NJ July 6, 2011 -- JHP Pharmaceuticals, a leading provider of contract manufacturing services for sterile injectable products has entered into an agreement with an undisclosed pharmaceutical company. The agreement is for the product transfer and registration batch production of a life-saving drug.

Commenting on JHP's selection, Stuart Hinchin, CEO and President of JHP noted, "Our cGMP compliance record and experienced staff allow us to effectively serve this important customer. JHP's history of manufacturing DEA-regulated products is vital in producing this terminally sterilized life-saving drug. We see this partnership as another opportunity to demonstrate our customer-focused approach in the manufacture of quality-driven products that save patient lives."

Hinchin also noted, "During the last six months, we successfully completed FDA and EMA audits in addition to entering agreements with four new contract customers. Our continued investment in our people and our facility has resulted in an internal infrastructure that supports ongoing sustainable growth."

JHP's Rochester, Michigan manufacturing site has a solid history of successful partnerships, manufacturing clinical and commercial products.
